

RICHARDSON IN THE LEAD

He May Secure the Democratic Nomination for Speaker.

The Tennessee Representative Said to Have Sixty-seven Votes Already Pledged—Other Candidates Fighting Hard for the Minority Leadership—Claims Made by Aspirants.

Representative Grosvener, Chairman of the House Republican Caucus Committee, will today, it is expected, reach this city to remain until after Congress adjourns. Immediately after the arrival of Representative Grosvener, Representative Richardson, Chairman of the House Democratic Caucus Committee, will call on him and together they will arrange the time for holding the caucus of the respective parties. The matter of detail would have been attended to before this, had not General Grosvener been absent from the city during the past week.

It was said today by a prominent member of the House that there is no doubt that both the Republican and the Democratic House caucuses will take place next Saturday, but the hour is yet to be determined. Inasmuch as the Republican party is in control of the House, it is the desire of the Democrats to let General Grosvener select first the hour for the convening of the Republican caucus, and then the Democrats will arrange for theirs.

If the Republicans prefer to meet during the day, the Democrats will assemble at night.

The contest for the minority leadership is now on in earnest, and each of the four candidates for the honor—Messrs. Richardson, De Armond, Sulzer, and Bankhead—is working hard to secure the place. Each claims that his chances are the best and each has special reasons to offer why he should be selected to receive the Democratic nomination for Speaker, and the honor conferred thereby by being the minority leader on the floor. Each of the four candidates has expressed himself as being very confident of success in the contest Saturday.

A Democratic member of the House said today that in his opinion Mr. Richardson had the best chance of election. He said that the latter had been assured that he would have from New York and New Jersey votes, and that Mr. Richardson's friends believed that this number would be increased during the week.

"I would not be surprised," said the Representative, "if Mr. Richardson were to win the caucus with a majority of the votes. He would only require eighty-three ballots to obtain that, and if, as is claimed, he has already sixty-seven, I do not see great difficulty in the way for obtaining sixteen more votes."

"The friends of Mr. Sulzer have put up a claim that he has had promised to him from forty to forty-four votes, but I am inclined to doubt this. Outside of the New York and New Jersey Democrats, who desire to please Richard Croker, I do not understand where Mr. Sulzer can hope for votes, although his friends assert that he will get them from Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, Maryland, and one from Massachusetts."

"Mr. DeArmond will have the solid delegation of twelve from Missouri, and it is claimed on apparent good authority that he has pledged to him thirty-nine or forty votes. Mr. Bankhead's friends feel certain that they have at least forty votes, at present, and they hope to increase this number before the caucus on Saturday. The caucus will probably be held at 10 o'clock. Mr. Bankhead can hold together that number of votes, and I think that when the split in his ranks takes place the vote of his followers will be divided between Richardson and DeArmond, and that the former will capture enough to ensure his election."

DISTRICT SCHOOL TROUBLES.

A Statement Concerning the Attempt to Drop Arithmetic.

Shortly after the annual session of the schools was commenced last September, the Commissioners received a letter from J. P. Howard, regarding the proposition to drop arithmetic from the studies of the eighth grade. Mr. Howard stated that this is one of the most important studies in the public school system, and the dropping of it from the curriculum of studies would be a serious disadvantage to the pupils. Mr. Howard also made an attack on the Superintendent of schools, and the Director of the High Schools. He said that Superintendent Powell and Dr. Lane were not the proper persons to have charge of the education of the children of this city, and they proved their incompetency by their latest order.

The letter was received by the Board of Trustees of the Public Schools, and it was returned to the Commissioners today with the curt endorsement that it was not the intention of the school authorities to drop arithmetic from the list of studies used in the eighth grade school.

These studies have been considerably discussed of late, and the District officials desire that the public know the exact state of affairs. It is not and never has been the intention of the school officials to drop the study of arithmetic, as the trustees have stated.

"Superintendent Powell's idea was to have the pupils so far advanced in arithmetic when they left the seventh grade," a prominent school official stated today, "that they would take up algebra immediately, on the opening of the school year in the eighth grade. This course was to be pursued until the Christmas holidays, at which time the pupils would be taken up again in connection with algebra. This was done on account of the failure of many pupils to sustain their percentage in the High School, on account of not having sufficient instruction in algebra in the grade below."

"Both the Superintendent and the Director of the High Schools recognize the importance of arithmetic, and it was simply an experiment in the schools trying. It was not intended to put the plan into practice until next year, when the utility of it would have been known from actual experience. The result of the publication of the plans has been that the District schools have seen severely criticized by persons who do not know all the facts in the case."

EAGAN'S FRUITLESS QUEST.

Army Officers Criticize His Reported Effort for Reinstatement.

The report that Charles P. Eagan intends to ask for reinstatement at the head of the Commissary Department of the army and a subsequent retirement is regarded among his former associates in the service as characteristic of the man. His reported intention is the subject of much adverse comment.

Said one of a group of officers, whose views on the matter were sought: "One would think that Eagan's escape from the fate which it certainly seemed was sure to overtake him, when he was summoned before the trial board, would have made him thankful to sink into obscurity and draw his pay in silence."

"I served with him many years ago," said another, "and if my memory serves me, he was anything but much against the man in those days, but there was a general inclination to let him pretty well alone."

The suggestion was offered that there was said to be some basis for hope on the part of the deposed officer that such an application as he proposed filing would not meet with the rebuff that many expected. "Eagan will never regain his old position in the army," said another officer. "The President will hardly dare to entertain such a proposition."

"Eagan is officially defunct so far as the army is concerned, and if he does have the tenacity to seek reinstatement, it will amount to naught. A big salary for the rest of his life as a reward for such a series of acts as were proven against him ought to suggest to him the decency of permitting the public to forget. If it can, the whole malodorous affair."

"These opinions indicate the sentiment of the average army officer so far as Eagan's reported effort to secure vindication is concerned. At the War Department a stolid silence is maintained when the subject is broached, and enquiries are met with the response that the officials have neither the time nor the inclination to discuss the matter."

NO TRACE OF HER HUSBAND.

Lewis Johnson's Wife Nearly Insane Over His Disappearance.

Lewis Johnson, colored, disappeared suddenly and mysteriously last night, and now his wife, Eliza, in distress is searching for him. She has asked the police to assist her in the search and states she is sure her husband is in the custody of "night doctors." Mrs. Johnson explained to the police that the circumstances surrounding the disappearance warrant her belief. According to her story she and Mr. Johnson were walking in Q Street, near Thirtieth, when the husband suddenly exclaimed "wait for me a minute," and entered an alley. Mrs. Johnson waited several minutes and became alarmed at the protracted absence of her husband.

The alarm was increased when a carriage emerged from the darkness of the alley and rushed rapidly away. Then Mrs. Johnson recalled that a stable connected with an undertaking establishment was located in the alley.

Although, by no means, allayed, the alarm or apprehension of Mrs. Johnson, with the result that her fear soon knew no bounds. Vainly she called to "Lewis" and vainly she endeavored to make herself believe he was safe and would return. Finally Mrs. Johnson gave vent to her feelings in loud and prolonged shrieks of "murder," which attracted the police and a large crowd. The officers, Mrs. Johnson relates, her fears, and despite the efforts to console her, she remained firm in her belief.

Fearing that possibly Mr. Johnson had been taken to the police station, Mrs. Johnson communicated the facts as they received them to Headquarters and from there a general "lookout" was sent to all the stations. At a late hour this afternoon it had been ascertained that Johnson had been located.

Johnson is fifty-eight years of age, and lives with his wife at 1612 Fourth Street northwest. He was accompanying his wife home from church at the time of his disappearance.

HAD DELIRIUM TREMENS.

A Police Court Prisoner Creates Considerable Excitement.

George Thomas, a young man who was in the dock in Judge Kimball's court this morning, created considerable excitement among his fellow-prisoners, and not a little uneasiness among the spectators on account of his alleged attack of delirium tremens. He was arraigned charged with being an habitual drunkard, and because of the fact that he had been in court three times within a limited period, charged with the same offense, a sentence of sixty days in the workhouse was imposed.

Immediately after being sentenced Thomas was taken to the lock, at which he resembled agony. His eyes started and he shook violently. Suddenly he aroused the court with loud and prolonged yells, and then began a struggle with imaginary foes in the shape of snakes, insects, and rats.

Bailiff Cole and other court attendants took hold of Thomas and attempted to quiet him, but without avail. Finally after the shouting of Thomas became unbearable and his condition alarming a physician was summoned, who quieted the prisoner.

FUNDS FOR THE CENTENNIAL.

The Dewey Reception Committee Contributes $500 to It.

J. W. Babson, treasurer of the Dewey Reception Committee, has written to Commissioner Wright, notifying him that the committee has authorized him to place $500 of the surplus from the reception fund at this disposal of the committee, having in charge the centennial celebration in this city next spring.

Mr. Babson states that he is not aware of the appointment of a treasurer for this fund, and he has placed the Dewey committee's contribution to this credit in a local bank, and will deliver it to any person authorized to receive it.

The communication has been acknowledged, and the writer informed that M. M. Parker is treasurer of the District schools. A meeting of the centennial committee will be held tomorrow afternoon at committee headquarters.

SCHOOLS IN PORTO RICO

The Lack of Them Decried by Professor Brown.

Despite Liberal Appropriations, Only One Child in Ten Can Be Reached by the Present System—Pupils Bright and Eager to Learn—Havoc Wrought by the Great Hurricane.

Prof. Anselm B. Brown, who for the past six months has been English supervisor of the schools of Porto Rico, has returned to this city. To report for The Times today he gave an exposition of the educational conditions in that island. Said Prof. Brown:

"A military government such as is in existence in Porto Rico carries with it the idea of force; but it is accomplishing its purposes in a gentle and peaceable way. In the matter of schools, no forcible measures are taken whatever to conflict with the Spanish schools already in existence. We have a board of education, which secures American teachers, pays the salaries, furnishes school books, and introduces English into as many schools as practicable; but, unfortunately, this latter extends only so far as the municipal schools and the rural districts are not reached."

"The island," continued Prof. Brown, "is divided into thirty-seven districts, and a supervisor of schools has been established in each district. His duty is to give free instruction in English to all the native teachers, who will come to him on Saturdays afternoons, visit all the schools as often as practicable, and explain the work that is desired to be carried on, and follow it up with suggestions for improvement in the various methods found in vogue. He is supposed to introduce English, and supplies Appleton's first reader at a nominal cost to those who buy by them, and to the poorer children he gives them gratis. The teachers take lessons from the supervisor, and keep far enough ahead of the scholars to teach them with intelligence. The teachers, with the exception of a few, are very good, they do very well, for in from six to eight months they can finish this small first reader."

"Everything was going on well under this plan until the awful hurricane of August 8, and that hurricane focused in Porto Rico, where I was located. I had forty-five schools under my charge in the district of Ponce, and 2,000 pupils. The hurricane destroyed 1,300 copies of the First Reader, and the schools were well started in English. But the schools all over the island received a setback, and in Ponce the schools were the great storm. Sixteen school buildings in my district were entirely demolished, and a score of others were made uninhabitable until repaired. The teachers and their families, live right in the school-houses in Porto Rico, because there are no public school buildings there. The schools are held in the private residences of the teachers. Sixteen teachers lost everything they had, and were helpless, and educational matters were for a period at a standstill. There was a great deal of confusion in getting started again. It was not until now that the schools have been opened, and now on their previous footing."

Prof. Brown said that there was large room for criticism of educational methods in Porto Rico, but that it was scarcely fair to judge very harshly as yet, because everything is so new, conditions untried before, dense ignorance of the population, and general lack of acquaintance among the natives as to what should constitute a proper educational system.

The appropriation which has already been made, he said, will not begin to carry educational facilities to the poor people and children. As an illustration, Prof. Brown stated that here in Washington we have about 1,200 teachers for a population of about 240,000, while in Porto Rico, 100 miles long and thirty miles wide, a population of 1,000,000 they have only 500 teachers.

"Even with the present liberal policy of the Government in carrying education to the children," said Prof. Brown, "it is impossible to reach more than one child in ten, throughout the island."

"The only hope for Porto Rico," continued Prof. Brown, "is to dot the whole island with schoolhouses. It is worthy of remark that the children are naturally bright and exceedingly anxious to learn."

"Speaking of the character of the Porto Rican people, Prof. Brown stated that it was his experience that they were treacherous and deceitful, as they have been frequently painted. He stated that he was well acquainted with the members of the municipal council, for a case."

"The Most Desirable." He said that the most desirable and the purest and when you hear the people talking about beer they always say, 'Mazzini, Scania, and Lager are the most desirable, because they possess such superior qualities. If you want Heurich's call for Mazzini, Scania, and Lager by their names, and you will conclude that no other beer can equal their beverages.' Phone 604, Arlington Bottling Co., for a case."

When you see a different attitude toward the matter when you become accustomed to call Mazzini, Scania, and Lager by their names, and know that you are not being deceived as to the quality of Heurich's beer, you will find it well worth a case of Heurich's in bottles.

ACCUSED OF ROBBING GRAVES.

The Trial of John H. Marlow Begins Today.

The hearing in the case of John H. Marlow, colored, indicted for grave robbing, began this morning in Criminal Court, No. 1, before Justice Claiborne and a jury. The Government was represented by Assistant District Attorney Ashley M. Gould, and the defendant by Messrs. Samuel D. Traut and W. E. Poulton.

The offense with which Marlow is charged was committed some time between midnight on March 1, 1896, and dawn of the following day. On the afternoon of March 1, 1896, the body of John Williams was interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, and some time during the night following it was exhumed.

On the morning of March 2, between 6 and 7 o'clock, it is alleged that the defendant offered a box containing the body of John Williams to the Adams Express Company for shipment to Philadelphia. The officials at the freight yards of the company at Sixth Street and Virginia Avenue southwest became suspicious of the contents of the box and ordered it to be opened. It was found to contain a dead body.

The police authorities were immediately informed, and on the day following Lieutenant Daly, then a sergeant of police, attached to the Fourth police station, arrested George H. Marlow, father of the defendant, and a man named Jones, for the crime of grave robbing.

The defendant, however, escaped arrest at the time, and was not apprehended until some weeks ago. Last week he was indicted by the grand jury for the District.

When George H. Marlow and the man Jones were tried, they were both found guilty of grave robbing, and sentenced to serve terms of two years each in the penitentiary. Their terms of imprisonment have expired.

The defendant, John H. Marlow, who called to trial, pleaded the statute of limitation, on the ground that the offense with which he is charged, was committed more than three years prior to the time an indictment was found against him.

EMIL SCHIFF'S EXPERIENCE.

Bogus Checks Cashed to Help Keep the Appearance of Prosperity.

AUSTIN, Texas, November 27.—Emil Schiff, the son of a millionaire of New York, has been convicted here of forgery and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. He will be taken to prison today.

The prisoner is twenty-one years old, and left New York city last spring on a business trip to Mexico for his father. He spent several weeks in that country. He got in with a fast set of Americans in the City of Mexico and soon overreached his expense money. He was then ordered by his father to return to New York.

The young man had enough money to come as far as Austin and he stopped over to visit a prominent family whom he had met in the City of Mexico. He became a social lion here within a few days, and in order to keep up appearances while waiting to hear from his father he cashed a number of bogus checks at local banks. He was arrested and placed in jail. He appealed to his father to come to his aid, but the latter refused to do so, and no defense was offered at the trial. The prisoner's brother paid him a brief visit a few days ago.

OBITUARY.

Lieut. W. H. Williams.

Lieut. W. H. Williams, of Asheville, N. C., died at the Medico-Chirurgical Hospital, in Philadelphia, Saturday morning, from the effects of an operation for the removal of a bullet from his neck. The bullet was removed by Dr. Ernest L. Place, and it was thought that the operation would be successful, but the shock was too great. Lieutenant Williams received the bullet, which was from a Mauser rifle, about two months ago, while leading a charge against the Philippines outside of Manila. The ball struck him beneath the right eye, shattering the jaw bone. Doctors in the Philippines declined to remove the bullet because of the network of veins in the neck, and he was brought to Philadelphia. The first operation resulted in a wound to the jugular vein, which caused considerable loss of blood, but Saturday's operation was attended with the loss of so little blood that it was thought that it would be successful. The mother and sister of the lieutenant were in the hospital at the time the operation was performed. They will take the body to their home in Asheville.
